

Todd,

You recently asked our opinion of the Ultra anchor that we recently purchased for our Whittley 2600.

The boat came fitted with a Delta anchor which under normal circumstances would have been adequate.

On two occasions we had the anchor drag in the middle of the night under the mud albeit it appeared to be set when first checked.

We discussed this with Todd Holzapfel when having our barbecue serviced & he showed us the Ultra anchor & suggested we try it out on appro. which we did with immediate success.

We tried it in sand, mud & very thick mud (the problem area) & could not get it to drag. In the thick mud we opened the throttle about one third & with a duo prop could not budge it.

They are not the cheapest anchor around but second to the power train the anchor is the next in importance.

There is nothing like a good nights sleep.

Regards

David & Kathy P.
