

Ultra Anchors Pass the Test

John and Sue Gilder have reported back to us from Tonga after recently weathering a nasty storm with winds gusting 55 knots. Their Selene 53 was fitted with Ultra Anchors before it headed up to the Pacific Islands and these anchors have now proved more than just good looks. The impressive stainless steel Ultra anchor held tight throughout the storm while other boats had troubles with dragging anchors. The Gilder's said, "Boats were dragging around us and the fleet was threatened by a seemingly out of control local ferry that came very close to us. It was a good test for the Ultra anchor which held firm."
